Miss Lebanon, Danielle Salamouny was yesterday crowned the World Supermodel after five days of competition against 17 other models from around the world.

Miss Salamouny said the win called for a double celebration. The 22-year-old was also announced Miss Lebanon in the World Lebanon Supermodel ageant that was held back in her country just last week.

I am so happy to be the winner of this pageant. This calls for a double celebration for me. I prayed every night to win, and God has answered my prayers, she said.

Miss Salamouny stated that she will now be shifting her attention to her studies as she is still trying to pursue a Masters in Advertising and Marketing back home.

Miss Salamouny was also announced as Miss Photogenic.

I would like to thank all the other models for giving me stiff competition, Fiji is such a lovely place and I am looking forward to coming back here some time soon, she said

Miss Salamouny also wins a return trip to Fiji as part of her winning package deal.

Miss South Pacific, Mikaela Swamy was crowned Miss Teen Supermodel.

Miss Swamy's father cheered the loudest after she was announced Miss Teen Supermodel ahead of eight other Teen models.

Miss Swamy, 16, will travel to Lailai Island tomorrow for the Miss Teen Supermodel contest where there is 12 models contesting the Miss Teen Supermodel title.
